Minneapolis—Veteran author Tom “Papa Kubs” Kubinski was diagnosed with stage 4 throat cancer twice and lived to tell the tale. In his new book, Two-Time Stage 4 Cancer Survivor Says, Tom talks about his experiences with throat cancer, what he calls his “dance with the devil.”

“No one ever wants to hear ‘I’m sorry, but you have cancer, and it’s stage 4,’” Tom said. “Not just once did I hear that, but twice within seven years’ time. At diagnosis, it’s daunting. The path is unknown. I wrote this book to come alongside others, to share my journey and what I wished I had known at the outset. I believe I have gone through this experience to encourage other cancer patients and their caregivers, and to provide practical resources. As the old saying goes, knowing is half the battle.”

Two-Time Stage 4 Cancer Survivor Says is available for sale at select retailers as well as on Amazon.com.

Tom, a long-time Plymouth native and graduate of Osseo High School and St. John's University, is also available for speaking engagements by calling 612-760-3700.
